The upper three-quarter of the long and narrow scroll painting depicts twenty-eight teaching Buddhas arranged in eight rows. Shakyamuni Buddha is sitting on his high throne in the top row, flanked by two kneeling, adoring figures. The right and left corners are each occupied by a characteristic Thai stupa (chedi) with a tall flag on both sides. The scroll painting's stripes bearing Buddha's images are coloured by alternating black and red backgrounds. The nearly square-shaped bottom part of the scroll bears a narrative scene. The painting is framed by a narrow band of flowers and leaves.
